Why is this week's topic important for teamwork? (20 points)

This week we learned about the Multidimensional Influence Model. Not only did we learn about each of the six principles that make up MIM, we also learned how good we are at abiding by each of these attributes in a teamwork setting. This activity was very important because it will allow us all to identify and target the areas in which we need improvement.

How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks? (20 points)

I plan on contributing to the team this coming week by striving to improve the areas I scored low on. I'll also try to help my teammates improve in the areas they are liking, if they so desire.

How does your experience relate to other classmates' experiences? (20 points)

Filling out the MIM competency sheet was an interesting exercise because, as far as I can tell, no two students in the class earned the exact same score in every category. This means that we all have different strengths and weaknesses. It's important that individual make use of their strengths, and encourage their peers to do the same.

Tell me about what you taught someone? And what did they learn, that they didn't know before? (20 points)

I spoke with my wife about the MIM model, and went over the 6 different concepts to help myself remember them. My wife didn't find it all that interesting, but she thought that the scores I received provided an accurate representation of my skills and weaknesses.

If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel? (20 points)

I think a good example of people possessing different skills and working together can be found in the story of Moses and Aaron. Moses was scared to speak with pharaoh, because he was "slow of speech", so the Lord allowed Aaron to serve as Moses' mouthpiece.
